GOULD ACADEMY

Miss Barbara Newman Assisting Mr. Hunsicker as Physical Director at Gould Academy will be Miss Barbara Newman, also of New York, who received her training in the Physical Education Department of Russell Sage College Troy, New York, graduating in 1939. While in college Miss Newman was a leader in all school activities, serving as president of her class and the head of several honorary and social organizations, being outstanding her full four years. Since her graduation she has had charge of the atheletics and sports program in the Albany School for Girls where she developed unusual interests in many of the newer fields of girls' athletics.

Miss Newman will introduce many new and tried sports for the girls this year such as soccer, archery, folk dancing, etc., as well as carry on the established sports of the Academy. The gymnasium which was formerly used by both boys and girls will be given over completely to the girls and Miss Newman's time will be devoted wholly to this phase of school work. In addition to gym classes, and sports, there will be lectures and classes on personal health, hygiene and physiology for the girls and boys under the direction of their respective teachers.

THE LOW DOWN FROM HICKORY GROVE

Before the old Roman Empire blew up back yonder around 2000 vears ago, things were something like they are now, here. Taxes were sky-high-divorce was easy as shootin' fish-pleasure came firstspending for swords and chariots soared- religion was half-hearted.

I been gassin' about it with Henry-he is my neighbor. He says "Jo instead of standing around with your mouth open taking in all the new theories coming over the radio or reading 2-column columns by hysterical reporters, you better sharpen a coupla pencils and start writing your U. S. A. senators and U. S. A. congressmen, Tell 'em where to start pruning expenses Tell 'em to sweep out the Govt. pscychologists and economic experimenters. Tell 'em to send home their son-in-law and all other relatives. Anyway, send home all who are getting 2 thousand or upwards, per year. That would just about empty half the buildings. Tell 'em to sell the surplus furniture, including the 500 thousand swivel chairs. That might help start the ball rolling." he says.

Henry is not so handsome, but brother, he sure is no green pea. Yours with the low down, JO SERRA

Again we quote the Bridgton

"A high ranking Army officer, who, naturally enough, refuses to allow the use of his name, declares that the soldier morale is "generally good," but he adds that in any huge organization gathered together as hastily as was the selectee army there are bound to be "some cry-bables". That, of course, may be one way to put it, but as a matter of fact we don't believe that mott there are many "belly-achers" among the selectees. They realize that they have been gypped, and the cause of many more,-South they don't like it very well, but they aren't doing much beefing about it. They are accepting it as just one of those things that can't be helped and are taking it on the chin Say country, the boys included, underatood that it was to be only for a year-that one group would serve a year and then that they would be sent home to make room for another group. They had no idea when they were drafted for training that they would have to give thirty months of service. Now that the time has been extended they have no assurance that another GILEAD year or so will not be added. They are sore, of course, but they are no "cry-hables". Clayton Rand of the Dixie (Miss.) Guide, in discussing this point says: "The boys have lived up to their part of the program-they had to, or be sent to jail. Their government has welched on them, and it is but natural that they should feel that they have get used to deception. BOND

Q. Why should Americans buy Defense Bonds and Stamps now? A. Among the reasons are: (1) It is the quickest way in which every citizen can both serve his country and conserve his earnings, and (2) the purchase of the Bonds and Stamps helps not only to finance National Defense but also to prevent high prices and increased costs of living.

Mr. Cole, affectionately known by a host of friends at "King" Cole, was president of the Cole Jewelry company. He came here in 1914 from Washington, D. C., where he owned a jewelry store. His first impression of St. Petersburg was so favorable that he began negotiations at once for the purchase of the Hamilton Jewelry company. He continued operating both stores for nearly two years before selling out his northern holdings

SYNOPSIS

CHAPTER 1—bix men traveled the Chibougamau trail in the wilds of north-ten Canada. Six men died. They were reported drowned in the rapids. Mutarings around the camp fires expressed other things. Carry Finlay, whose brother Bob was one of the six; Red Malone and Blaise, a half-breed guide in the cuise of surveyors, arrive to investigate the deaths. Finlay had received an anonymous letter deciaring that the men were murdered. There is a suspicion that surveyors will be supplied to the was an important gold strike in the Waswanipi country and will stop at nothing the keep prospectors out.

CHAPTER II—The inhabitants are in error of Isadore and his right-hand man, rete.Blanche CHAPTER III—On the second day out, just as they had safely passed the worst the rapids, the three investigators are ambushed from shore. Garry and Maise were slightly wounded.

CHAPTER IV-From Indians Blaise samed ten days later that there is such exclument among them over a big bird" from the south, and that sere is talk that three men perished in Nottaway.

CHAPTER V-Finlay and Molone visit Izadore in his magnificent home. A sly attempt to poison them is trustrated by a clever trick by Malone.

CHAPTER VI—Wabistan, chief of the Montagnals, tells Pinlay that the six men who lost their lives on the Waswanipi where shot, and talks of a "bird" that makes a loud noise

"Lost night we saw him when a torch flared in a canoe."

"A little man held the torch in the bow?"

"Yes, a small man."

"It was Tetu, his shadow, who obeys him like a dog-even to kill-Ing those he hates." Wabistan kicked at a pebble with his moccanin, then he lifted a face seamed with the hate that glowed in his eyes. "Isle! Tete-Blanche is hunt-Ing you," he said in Montagnals, "and he comes here to find Kinebik, the wabeno, who is my enemy."

"He is a conjuror, this Kinebik?" The old Indian laughed. "Kinebik, the Serpent, is a false shaman, Tele-Blanche uses him to put fear into the hearts of the foolish ones who listen to his medicine. He tells my people he talks with spirits."

Blaise interpreted Wabistan's remarks to his friends. "But Wablstan is treaty-chief and the Montagrais will not listen to Kinchik," demurred Finlay.

Wabistan turned to Finlay and his breath hissed through his teeth. "There are many who will listen! There is trouble among my people!" "Where in this wabene, Kinebik, Blasse rapidly interpreted his talk with Wabistan and the two white men took the oath with the old chief and his sons,

The following day a Peterboro and two birch barks entered the mouth of the Waswanlpi River. In their rear, on either shore, traveled a son of the chief to watch for following canoes and a possible ambush. Three days of poling, tracking and carrying around rapids brought them to the roaring mile of falls, chutes and bolling reaches climaxing in the Frying Pan, the white chaos which gave the rapids its name. After a search in the birch scrub of the high shore Wabistan raised his hand.

"It is here," he called, "the grave!" Red glanced at Finlay's bitter face. "It will be hard, Garry, to see him now. You'd better leave it to Blaise and me."

"You can't identify him! They'll want to know, back home, that I saw him. I've got to see the evidence that he was shot."

Red nodded and Finlay joined Blaise and Wabistan beside a heap of small boulders. "The carcajou! let dem sleep," said the Indian. "De | nearer his goal than he had been rock too heavy to move!"

men were drowned," The man who had written that letter had guessed only too well. Following this It had taken weeks of wire-pulling for Finlay to obtain from his superiors the Nottaway assignment for himself and Malone, But in the end the letter from the unknown writer had brought it about and they had received their orders.

Shortly Malane stood beside the man whose broading eyes were on the rock-scarred rapids below him "Garry!"

"Yes." "They shot them. The change in him-it's going to be hard for you, Garry "

"I've not to see him!" "Here's a piece of their canoe Wabistan found on the shore and buried with them There's a bullet hole in it." Garry took the chattered cedar.

"We'll keep that for evidence," be said, then followed Malone. While the atters stead with bared brade he faced into the shollow grave of the laver a year had wrought.

"Ibilay!" Finlay dropped to his find year the a leader of nechood, knees and guzed at what had once been the sourcer brother whom he had carried in his arms, with whom he had should his bed. unseeing eyes stared at the hills across the valley as he muttered: "It may be weeks! It may be months! It may be years, Isadore! But some day you'll pay to me for that dead boy, there!"

The survey had been under way for two weeks. Two of Wabistan's sons were working for Finlay as canoemen and the old Indian often came to the camp with news of his secret search for Tete-Blanche, Tetu and Kinebik. But Isadore's private assassin and the medicine man had disappeared like river mist before the sun.

"Tete-Blanche is somewhere in the islands but none will say they have seen him. They have fear," announced Wabistan to Blaise as his cance slid in to the beach one day in early July. "Your ears must be ever listening for he is waiting for a chance to strike."

"When he comes, we will fill him with lead," laughed Finlay.

The Indian scowled. "Like ottawok, the gray owl, he will move in the night and when he strikes there will be no sound,"

Finlay had mapped the head of the great lake and was working west toward the post. Wabistan's failure to find his enemy in the islands had in no wise caused the survey party to relax their vigilance. They knew that they were marked men and that some thick night an attempt would be made to surprise them in their sleep, for Isadore could not afford to have them reach Rupert House.

Nevertheless, the evidence against him and Tete-Blanche was entirely circumstantial. No one had seen Bob Finlay and his partner shot out of their canoe. No one could prove who had wounded Finlay and Blaise on the Nottaway. After weeks on the sixty-mile lake Garry was no that night when he had looked into Lise Demarais' frightened eyes.

It was two hours before dawn of a morning when Finlay had taken the last watch, Stors and moon were sliced with a knife.

"What a night for a stalk, Monsleur Tete-Blanche!" muttered Garry. "If you know where we are, you're missing a trick, my friend. sylvania. But It'll be just too bad if this say won't see him but he'll reach youplentyl Eh, Flame, old partner!" Finlay reached a hand to the wirehaired back of the sleeping dog beside him. Flame instantly stiffened on the alert. Then, with a low grunt, he found his master's hand with a warm tongue. Garry drew the Iron body over on his lap burying his Stearns. face in the shaggy neck. "Grand night for them to stalk us, Flame! What do you think?"

The airedale grunted with contentment and, for a space, lay sprawled over Garry's legs while the man he worshiped crouned into a hairy ear. Then, of a sudden, the iron muscles hardened along his spine and the coarse back hair lifted.

"He's winded something!" Finlay muttered, with a quick tig on the raw-hide running to the sleeping Red's wrist.

As two invisible shapes moved to Finlay's side the aroused dog split the thick silence with his brittle challenge.

"That'll worry 'em!" multered Red, "Stop 'em in their tracks! Hear anything?

"Not a thing! Flame winded them! You'd better stiffen up the bays while Blaice and I listen bere." Red moved stiently away while the enraged dog charged deeper into the forest.

"Flame'll Lcep them guessing Blance!" mattered Finlay "He'll rip chunks out of the firs' one he noses out! The y'll have no chance to shoot or you a knife on him tought."

Presently Red returned "The boys ore all right. They're hot for a beht Heer anything?"

"Flame's working this way, now! Hear that?" There was the armistakable sound of samething moving through thick

"He's taked come of them out and turned them!" whispered Mahine They're warried and dea't know they're to a distraight for uni"

"Where's that e?" asked Finlay

Nearer worked the roaring airedale nosing out the trail in the night. "Strange," muttered Finlay, "they should make so much noise! From the way they travel they must be stampeded." Shortly there was a crash of brush in front of him. He raised his pistol. Then a heavy body floundered past,

"Hell!" The cocked gun dropped to Finlay's side.

The beast plunged on, followed by the airedale, and his hoofs clopped on the stones as he took the lake shore.

There was a laugh from the gloom, "By gar, Boss!" chuckled "We need dat moose meat Bla se.

YES, LADY, we know you were well brought up. You say "Please" and "Thank you" and use the right fork and write the nicest bread and butter letters. But when it comes to your conduct while driving, you most definitely could learn manners from a truck driver.

Truck drivers are good drivers. They keep on their side of the road, they don't go at fantastic speeds, they practice that fundamental rule of democracy and good breeding: Give the other fellow a break.

Which is more than can be said for many of our nicest ladies and gentlemen. A strange transformation takes place when the sit behind a steering wheel. They ignore the comfort of friends riding with them. They disdain the rights of people on foot. They yell boorishly at drivers who displease them.

Many who wouldn't touch a nickel that belonged to someone else flaunt all law and order when behind a steering wheel, with the callousness of experienced criminals. The serious part of this curious behavior is that had manners make bad driving, and bad driving makes accidents and death.

So mend your manners and become a
